

Women Who Care Application and Guidelines

Application Deadline August 15

Awards are limited to nonprofit charitable organizations with current exempt status as defined by the Internal Revenue Code – Section 501(c)(3) and schools or municipalities.

Maximum annual award from Women Who Care is $5000.

Awards may be considered for start-up funds, new projects or to enhance well-established programs.

Requests must not duplicate the work of other local organizations and must reflect sustainability and/or other ongoing support.

Limitations of Women Who Care Awards

Women Who Care does not

- make awards to individuals.
- make awards for capital campaigns or to fund endowments.
- fund the same project more than once – unless there are unusual circumstances.
- fund organizations that promote a particular religious or political ideology.
- fund advertising, dinner galas or other fundraising events.
- fund contributions to the general fund of an organization.
- fund overhead administrative cost exceeding 10% of request.

The applications recommended to the membership will be based on:

- Quality of the Project/Services
- Number of Individuals Served
- Management of the Project.

Women Who Care may award less than the amount requested.

Inquiries/questions may be directed to Paula Fritz Eddy of the Elk County Community Foundation at (814) 834-2125 or by e-mail to eccf@elkcountyfoundation.org. Electronic grant applications are available by contacting the Foundation or on their website (elkcountyfoundation.org).

Recommended grant applications will be presented to the full membership of WWC in video format at its annual meeting in the fall. A 3-minute video from each grant application will be required at that time. Video does not need to be submitted with the initial grant application. You will be notified by the Foundation at a later date of the deadline to submit your video. This video is your opportunity to promote the project to the membership for their vote.
